Throughout her growing up years, in the 1920s and the depression years of the 30s, her family moved from place to place, and state to state. As the result of these frequent moves she didn t start school until she was eight years old and after she had finished the 8th grade her mother ended her schooling. As her mother put it at the time, There s no need for a woman to go to high school. More importantly Dora Imogene was needed at home to help her mother with household chores and caring for several younger siblings. At seventeen she eloped to escape her domineering mother and a year later in January 1938 she was an eighteen year old mother. By the time she was divorced at thirty-seven in 1956 she had six children. She went on, with a job in a small town factory, to buy and pay for her own house (she even managed to pay the mortgage off three years early) and to raise her...
