Excerpt: .of school duties and the ennui of the street are the only alternatives, and hence the children are willing--alas not ready l--to go to work. The reason why parents cannot keep their children in school, but can keep them at work is because the children themselves want to do something. Irene Ashby Macfadyen, in speaking of the number of children in cotton mills in Alabama, has said: . . to these must be added the children who come in to help elder brothers and sisters, who are not counted or paid as workers, although they often do a full day s work for the fun of it. The fun of it --the pity of it! This is an extreme example, but none the less a real example of the irrepressible activity of the child which takes advantage even of the cotton mill to express...
