His writings, which are not numerous, are chiefly devotional; but he also published a History of the Diocese of Bayeux during the Revolution, and a Biographical Dictionary of the Departments of La Manche, Calvados, and lOme. He died in 1820. (Biog. Univ. Snopl. ) BISTAC, (Francis, ) a French grammarian, bor n at Langres in 1667. He is known as the editor of Garniers Latin grammar, called the Rudiments of Langres, which, having gone through many editions, is used very generally in the colleges of that province, nnd being translated into Italian, was published at Perugia in 1813. He died in 1752. BISTERFELD, (John Henry, ) a nalive of Germany, professor of theology and philosophy at Weissenburg or Karlsburg, in Transylvania, to which appointment he was invited in 1629. Here he met with great success. and displayed such knowledge in mathematics and physics, that he was considered by the common people to be a necromancer. He warmly opposed Stephen Catona, chaplain of the royal household, who brought with him puritanical doctrines from England, and wished to introduce them into the reformed church of Transylvania and Hungary. He succeeded so far, that prince Raksczy decreed that none professing the puritanical faith should sit in the synod of Sakmar. However, after Catonai death the puritan became the prevailing faith amongst the reformers of Transylvania. Bistcrfeld died on the 6th Feb. 1655, leaving various writings of no interest to English readers....
