Excerpt: .The croupiers rake in the coin and the notes, and fling coin on to the winning numbers with a rapidity and exactitude that makes an unmathematical brain reel. It would seem to be an excellent school for learning multiplication and division, whilst some of the middleaged ladies will give you any such lessons as may arise from subtraction. One looks in vain for the little bits of melodrama that are so vividly described by people who have not been to the place. But, as a rule, the chief excitement manifested is over the winnings. I certainly saw one man who looked unwell and disturbed. But he declared it was the atmosphere--which, considering its nature, was highly probable. As far as I saw--and as far as I have heard--sang froid, real or assumed, reigns undisturbed. A lady at Mentone one day told me as a fact that the gendarmes go round the gardens regularly every morning and evening to search under all the bushes for dead bodies. No such gruesome suggestion, however, is apparent either in the aspect of the bushes of the gardens, or the smiling gardeners who pick up the bits of paper they find about. And to view so dark a matter for a moment seriously, it is to be reasonably supposed that in the tragedies which have happened in this beautiful place, the real cause of each tragedy may be found to have taken its rise in a drama OUTSIDE. of which...
